Boston via the...

The original!

Every Tufts student's adventure into Boston begins here.

Kay & Chips was at one time a great place to satisfy the munchies ... ahhh, memories of late nights and early mornings.

The people of Davis Square—on a typical day.

A Store 24 that closes at 12?

Bertucci's—a little taste of Italy.

For all your weekend needs.

PORTER

Porter shapes up.

Think RED!

Traditional Tufts dining.

If campus food did not appeal to you, then you must have known this place well.

HARVARD

The place for all your dorm room needs—POSTERS.

A favorite dining spot among Boston's collegiates—it's always worth the wait.

From the Times to the Tibetan version of GQ, they've got it.

The Harvard hang out—a great spot for people watching.

Parking your car in here might break a bunch of records.

e beautiful Boston Skyline.

o Red Sox!

The Museum of Science: a great place to spend a rainy day.

CENTRAL

*"Park Street ...
Change to the Green Line."*

A quiet reading place on a cool Fall afternoon

A veritable cornucopia of sorts strolls the Commons each day

The hustle and bustle of downtown Boston

PARK STREET

Faneuil Hall & Quincy Market ...we need not say more!

Random ...

How do you sum up everything about Tufts in one piece of writing? Obviously you don't. Tufts is many things, but most importantly, it's a University. Always stay in line, remember who you're dealing with. This isn't real life, you know? Tufts is passive protests and Letters to the Editor. Tufts is after-hours frat parties and pub night in MacPhie. Tufts is complaining about food in Carmichael, but still going there everyday because you have a 1:05 in Barnum 008.

Lessons: Get ready for the future, get a well-rounded liberal arts education and go to the language lab everyday. These are essential. But don't forget to charge a few hundred dollars worth of points to your bursars bill or pretend The Band is really worth seeing at Spring Fling. And remember those kids at Harvard are geeks, just richer ones. Sledding is not allowed - except on lunch trays on the hill near Wessell. Don't ever let academics get in the way of your schoolwork. We all must take Professor Wilson's American Lit because he talks about Danny Glover, Mel Gibson, and Sixteen Candles but when we really grow up, it's time for Melville, Hawthorne and Poe. Grades? Well they don't always tell the whole story, now do they—That is unless you take Intro to Music, French 2 and Biology: Man and Nature, in the same semester. This is an English major's dream - then the grades really do count.

The money they made off us.

Just think about it, besides the approximately $80,000 over four years for tuition, the wrath of every shop owner on Hillside is felt as the same students who bought all the Beelzebubs, Amalgamates and Jackson Jills records, CD's and tapes at the beginning of freshman year, along with the Grateful Fred and Equestrian team t-shirts, help create exponential profits by purchasing cartons of Orange Juice on Friday night for $3 a pop. But not all of those Hillside people were cheats—Jay always cuts a few bucks off a bill at the deli, and Enzo sure is good at those navy-cuts. Want to conserve money? Just don't buy a milk-shake at Jumbo scoops. That'll set you back 'til the next major holiday.

Four years go by, we don't even realize it. In four more years most of the class of '91 will be either married, planning on getting married, or at least own a Toyota. Enjoy the youth, soon the hairline goes, the waistline grows and there are too many answers you know.

President Jean Mayer

The Class of 1991 brought change to The Hill. Your larger class size and significantly higher scholastic scores promised much for your newly-chosen community. Your four year tenure began with the decades-old Cold War solidly in place. You witnessed the dramatic collapse of the Iron Curtain and America's involvement in a war in the Middle East. You will begin careers or enter graduate school in a world greatly altered by these events. You bring to your pursuits the advantage of one of the finest educations available and the friendship of some of the best and brightest young people today —your classmates. You have devoted a greater part of your free time volunteering on campus and in our neighboring communities than preceeding classes. The impact of your example will be felt here for a long time. You have learned much about art, music, literature, and drama and dance of many cultures. We have tried to foster diversity in all aspects of campus life knowing that the world you enter in whatever field will have a global orientation requiring knowledge and understanding of people and societies of many diverse backgrounds. You have fulfilled in great measure the promise you brought to your university. And now you are members of our distinguished corps of alumni/ae: I am sure we will hear fine reports about you in the years to come.

Provost Sol Gittleman

This is the class which tested the meaning of civility. You were tested for most of your four years at Tufts. How much verbal assault was enough? What was protected language on a tee—shirt? How do you use language to hurt someone? You were the class who experienced the Gulf War and heard the language of rage, de-humanization, and alienation. And you learned something. You learned that you didn't have to like someone, but you had to know what made people tick. You were the most mature class in the past decade, you saw how to deal with each other as human beings. You were tolerant. You also know how to have fun without hurting someone's feelings. In class, you were intellectually curious; you asked questions, made connections, saw things in interesting relations. You were a little quirky, and that was fine. Your minds were never routine, you never gave the impression of being ordinary, or even normal! You were fun to be with, but you knew the world could be dangerous. This was a cautionary bunch, who took a balanced view of the world's dangers, and said: We will survive and prosper.

Twenty Years of Change at Tufts

When asked how things have changed at Tufts since I arrived in 1971 as a freshly minted assistant professor, I often look to the Commencement ceremony as a benchmark. In the spring of 1972, Tufts was still fully engaged in anti-war, anti-"establishment" protest, and Commencement clearly reflected these sentiments. Impassioned speeches, "alternative" ceremonies, and a rejection of traditional academic regalia held sway. About every hundredth senior received his or her diploma dressed in a rented black academic cap and gown, and would be the object of some amusement or even hostility. The other seniors—those that deigned to be a part of Commencement—wore the usual uniforms: jeans, sneakers, sweatshirts or tie-dyed tee-shirts.

As the 70's progressed, there were changes. As Cottrell and Leonard, traditional purveyors of academic apparel, continued to sweat things out, seniors began to dress up for their Commencement. Attractive dresses and coats and ties became the rule, and the still-rare cap and gown now met little response.

Then, quite suddenly, mortarboards and gowns were in! Cottrell and Leonard were rewarded for their patience as thousands of college seniors began buying their cheap tear-away gowns (my classmates and I rented). Now the dress and suit were (and are) the rare exception to the implicit dress code.

Too much has probably been made of the shift in campus values from the idealism of the 70's to the commercialism and self-interest of the 80's. Somewhat less has been written about the more recent swing back to a more caring, even altruistic orientation among current students. We are clearly in an era of transition; investment banking has lost its luster as a career goal, but interest in the law is, if anything, increasing. Indeed I continue to be impressed (sometimes depressed) with the litigiousness of many students. However, we are also seeing an unprecedented interest among students in the future of the environment, multi-culturalism, internationalism, volunteerism, as evidenced by dramatic increases in the numbers of Environmental Studies majors, the new World Civilizations program, continued high interest in IR and study abroad, and a resurgence of the Leonard Carmichael Society as a positive force on campus. In each of these four areas, students are encouraged to turn outward, to use their education as an impetus for greater social understanding and positive social change.

But unquestionably the most dramatic change that has occurred during my nearly 20 years at Tufts is the increased importance of interdisciplinary programs. We have become an institution with thin, permeable disciplinary walls. In 1971 my own department offered a single major—Psychology. Since that time the Psychology Department has developed a Clinical Psychology major and has forged links with Sociology, Biology, and Engineering Design to create majors in Social Psychology, Biopsychology, and Engineering Psychology. Other programs and majors—American Studies, Peace and Justice, Environmental Studies, Interdisciplinary Minors, International Relations, and World Civilizations to name just a few—did not exist in 1971. Joint degree programs with the Fletcher School, the College of Engineering and most recently, the Medical School again attest to the movement toward interdisciplinary study.

Over the years of the Mayer presidency, Tufts has changed to build upon its traditional strengths and to develop new ones. That many of these changes now point toward socially valuable goals, approached from many disciplines, that will prepare our students to face the complexities of the twenty-first century is an exciting prospect indeed.

Now, I wonder how the class of '01 will dress for their Commencement!

Tufts' Concrete Canoes: A Brief History

The Tufts Chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers (ASCE) actually designed and built concrete canoes for competition racing during our time at the University. In fact, Tufts engineers won numerous awards.

In 1978 Tufts first entered a concrete canoe race, but the entry sank. It weighed several hundred pounds, and is believed to still be at the bottom of a river. After that, Tufts sat out for over a decade.

In recent years, however, Tufts has shown a resurgence of interest in the art of concrete canoe racing and has since been a strong force in New England. Tufts' 1989 entry is shown with five people in it.

In the spring of 1989, ASCE members bent wire mesh around a fiberglass canoe to get a rough idea of the shape desired for their canoe. Three eighth inch steel rebar was then bent into the shape of the mesh. The rear of the canoe was modified to have a flat, rather than tapered back, as this was intended to reduce overall weight and make the canoe more competitive. Wearing leather gloves, members covered the entire frame with wire cloth and sewed on the cloth with steel wire. Glob by glob over two hundred pounds of concrete were pressed onto the frame by hand. When it was finished, it measured twelve feet in length, thirty-two inches in width and eighteen inches in depth.

The canoe was so heavy, that on the day it was to be tested, the dolly constructed to transport it sunk into the ground. On a clear Thursday morning, in front of a large crowd, which spontaneously gathered at the Hamilton Pool, the engineers lowered their creation into the pool.

"It better not sink, or you're going in after it," warned the assistant athletics director. It didn't sink. In fact, it floated well, even when heavily loaded. The spectators cheered and applauded. The ASCE faculty advisor, Professor Richard gel, took the canoe on its maiden voyage. April 21, 1989, Tufts entered its nearly four-hundred pound monster canoe in the New England Concrete Canoe Race Invitational, held at Norwich University in Vermont. Although the Tufts canoe was larger and heavier than any of the other canoes, it still fared well.

"We came, we saw, we kicked their ASCE!" asserted Robert Becker, the ASCE Concrete Canoe Project Manager. Due to collisions, other canoes cracked and sank, but not the Tufts canoe. Even after a number of bumps, it was unscathed.

Tufts took seventh in the mens heat, fifth in the womens heat, fifth in the faculty heat, sixth in the male and female combination heat, and second in the "Four or more" race.

Various chemicals were added to the 1990 canoe concrete to modify the concrete properties. More care was also given to detail during construction. The final result was a lighter, sleeker canoe which performed much better than its predecessor.

The 1990 canoe was also tested in the Hamilton

Pool with good results. Tufts lighter 1990 entry was not as battle worthy as the previous canoe, however, and suffered damage due to two collisions during the race day. In the womens heat a hole let so much water flood into the canoe that it nearly sank out from under the paddlers before they finished the race. Overall, Tufts placed fourth in 1990.

The Community Health Program

The Community Health Program, established in 1973, is a multi-disciplinary program for students interested in health and health care. It offers an eight-course concentration that students take in conjunction with a major. On graduation, students receive a certificate in Community Health in addition to their undergraduate degree.

The Program encourages students to analyze the etiology of the central health problems that people in the United States face today with attention to regional, ethnic, gender and racial differences in health status. Students work on collective research projects and therefore learn about perspectives and methodologies inherent in other disciplines. Several courses examine the policies and health care systems of other countries. The curriculum includes the study of anthropology, medicine, history, sociology, psychology, economics, ethics, public health, classics, political science and biology as they affect our understanding of communities' strategies to promote health and cope with disease.

A central component of the Program is the internship, a one-credit field placement accompanied by a one-credit academic seminar. Here juniors and seniors get some "hands-on" experience working in diverse settings such as hospitals, health maintenance organizations, state and federal government agencies, human service agencies, private organizations such as consulting firms or non-profit organizations, and health advocacy and public interest groups. This field work allows students to try out new work roles and interact with a variety of professionals in the health field.

Undergraduate enrollment has been growing steadily since the Program's inception. While in the first few years enrollment hovered around 15-25 students, the Community Health Program now includes well over 90 students, with each graduating class containing around 30. These students major in a wide range of disciplines from biology to classics to economics to civil engineering, and make for a particularly diverse and interesting group.

The Fight Comes Home

The UN deadline may as well have been a motion passed by the TCU senate. Even as it approached, who really took it seriously? War, there won't be one, there couldn't be one. Not in our lifetime at least. The images on the screen shocked me like I'm sure they did everyone else. We moved from peace to war, from words to action and from answers to questions. Images to remember; General Schwarzkopf doing his best impression of Julia Child, mixing one-liners with video replays of bombings that seemed to be more like new Nintendo games than images of real destruction. Secretary of State, Dick Cheney, laughing as he holds up a Bart Simpson doll dressed in army fatigues and Simpson creator Matt Groening's reaction, "it's sad when you pull a ten year old into war." And the media, letting the men in stripes get through questioning sessions without answering any questions. CNN became the hero of the news wars and then the traitor as reporter Peter Arnett was accused of feeding Iraqi propaganda to the States and even letting the Iraqis use their phones. I don't think they were calling Dominos for a large pepperoni. Never has an event received as much time on the screen yet given such a minimal amount of information.

On campus demonstrators on both sides squabbled for the same goal; bringing the soldiers home safely. Sometimes the stereotypes and tension forced this common goal under the covers, but in the end, through all of the anti-war protests and American flags waving from fraternities, there was no way to argue any more. There were people dying for this war, and whether we should be there or not, they would keep dying unless the conflict ended.

This won't be another Vietnam everyone shouted while the Vietnam veterans we know were treated undeservedly, like dirt, sit in a cold smoke-filled shelter in Boston remembered as a group, but forgotten as real individuals. Will we forget our veterans as quickly? Only time knows.

One last image came from the Tufts campus. A sign up on the third or fourth floor of Houston hall showed the danger and reality to face when fear and confusion work hand in hand to create a sort of misguided cruelty. "Nuke Iraq," the sign read—and to think we'd learned our lesson.

Words of Advice

It is difficult to reflect on eleven years of teaching and "professing" at Tufts. However, what has constantly impressed me is that students at Tufts, by and large, are very committed to their professional goals. While this is easily understandable in the highly competitive economic times in which we live, I am concerned that many students have not balanced their life's goals in a way that makes them equally concerned about their personal relationships. I suppose it is a realization that one acquires with age, but what makes a person content with their life is not only their professional success, a goal I do not minimize, but also their success with having found someone with whom to share their life. I can think of few sadder scenarios than achieving a milestone in one's career without having someone with whom to share your joy and pride. Similarly, it is truly a self-centered individual who can be content with only their own success and not derive satisfaction from a loved one's happiness and achievements.

The world, unfortunately, is a cold and unfeeling place and our existence in it is tenuous and short-lived. Much that we value in our life-style can be swept away by economic downturns and a reversal in one's professional fortunes. After this occurs, what is left? Nothing, unless you have taken the time to establish a long term personal commitment to another and have nurtured this relationship in such a way that in spite of adverse occurrences the relationship will incur. While no one can predict the future and guarantee anyone's happiness, there is much you can do to help assure your life will not be lonely and filled with regret. Thus be kind to your loved ones and strive throughout your life to remember how important you are to each other. The best of luck.

So You've "Graduated"

Graduation is a lot like spilling your drink down the front of your pants in a restaurant in front of a date. In both cases you emerge physically unscathed, but you would have been much better off had it never happened in the first place. Perhaps in that way graduation is like any public humiliation. You always look back and say, "Oh, if I had just done one little thing differently, this never would have happened." For example, had you simply dried your hands after eating your spare ribs, your drink would have sagely reached your lips, and your manual dexterity and bladder control would no longer be in question. By the same token, had you not paid so much attention to your advisor, you might not have filled your graduation requirement and now would not be headed out to the cold, hard, 7 A.M. wake-up-call, 2-day weekend world.

It is amazing how quickly the graduation process turns against you. First you participate in Senior Week where you sentimentally reminisce with your friends and just then realize how much you mean to each other. For seven days you exist in a pressure-free environment, full of memories and partying, wishing it would never end, and then BAM! Your family arrives. Faster than you can say, "Look, shouldn't you be getting back to the hotel?" that pleasant buzz you have maintained for the entire week has metamorphosed into a searing migraine.

As soon as the family arrives, reality sadly slams home. The emotion-filled exchanges of "Hey, I'll really miss you, buddy" are immediately drowned out by the choruses of "Oy, will you look at all this stuff! How are we gonna fit all this in the car?" High school graduation was a time to spend with your parents, because you knew you had the whole rest of the summer to sit around with your friends and say, "I'll really miss you, buddy" until you didn't mean it anymore. College graduation, on the other hand, is a little bit more difficult to spend with them. Although you may be swamped with appreciation for the great education they made possible for you, you can not help but picture the scene in your house within a week: This wonderful, generous couple leaning over you saying, "So Mr./Ms. Graduate, do these mysterious post-graduate plans of yours include maybe helping around the house once in a blue moon?" This tends to deaden the desire to spend the "quality time" with them that they so rightly deserve at this joyous time in your life.

So as you plod toward the podium, robed and ready to receive your diploma/release papers, you look around you at all the other graduates who have the same dazed expression on their faces. You think to yourself, "Wait a minute! If we all join together, they can't make us leave." But, before you can try to begin an impromptu grass roots campaign to "take back the dorms," your hand is seized by someone who, as far as you know, could just as easily be the register guy from Mike's Deli as a member of the administration. A document is involuntarily pressed into your dry palm and you are shoved down the stairs.

It is at this point that you look backward and shake your head in disbelief. Those people who went before you are in black and white. You have officially entered the real world.

The rest of the day is a long series of hugs and shrugs. The hugs are from friends, family and overemotional coach ladies, while the shrugs come from being posed the question "So, how's it feel?" every five minutes. The rest of the day is a blur. You walk around the campus, taking one last look at the old homestead. You sigh as you remember the time you and your friends decided to paint the cannon. You sigh as you remember that all your friends actually slept through it and left you waiting out in the cold for them and the paint at four in the morning. Then you laugh again when you remember the big snowball fight you all had that time it snowed and classes were cancelled. Then, another sigh comes as you remember slipping on the ice and falling down Memorial Steps later that day. But hark! Here comes another laugh as you remember the time you accidentally slept through three days of classes and it had little to no effect on your life. And then comes the biggest sigh of them all as you realize that sleep—perhaps the most important and continuous component of your past four years—is soon to become as difficult to obtain as a clean pair of pants has been these past four years.

However, just as you begin to despair over the finality of the whole thing, the solution suddenly comes to you in two bright, shiny words. Graduate school. The perfect antidote to maturation. And this time you'll get it right. All it takes is one strategically failed course and you'll never have to go through this pesky graduation business again.

Race Awareness In American Society

As I near the end of my undergraduate years at Tufts, I begin to reflect upon the individuals, courses, and experiences that have had a profound impact on the development and growth of my person. Without hesitation, I can truthfully say that Race Awareness In American Society is the most important class I've taken to date.

Under the guidance of James Vance, the instructor, class members have to articulate as honestly as possible their personal feelings about themselves and other people within the context of American racism. Race Awareness forces each individual to scrutinize his or her own person and unearth the real reasons for why he or she may say or do certain things. It is a class that relies almost exclusively on class participation and interaction in order to arrive at a better understanding of and respect for the racial differences that constitute America's many realities.

As a result of this class, there was a huge transformation in my psyche and behavior. To put it bluntly and succinctly, I stopped play acting. For the first time, I clearly and honestly verbalized my feelings about racism in America and how I and other people fit into this puzzle. Furthermore, as a Person of Color, I began to question why I had denied certain things for so long and what this denial has cost me in terms of self-respect and self-esteem.

While the whole process of becoming racially aware was very difficult, I am a much happier and stronger person for it. When I consider the positive impact that Race Awareness has had on me and on countless people, I cannot help but feel a certain amount of pity and contempt for those individuals who refused to take the course because they were either too scared to do so or arrogant enough to think it was not applicable to them. Evidently, many preferred to seek security in their own ignorance. Yes, the truth does hurt, but racism hurts even more. Think about it.

Insight

A petal in a pond,
Sets itself adrift;
Wanders towards,
no end I see.

Sticks before me,
Settle upon each other;
Dependant, forces always near; Such awareness

Grows in my mind.
Springs, upon rivers,
merge into the sea.
Vast, yet finite.

A color dazzles,
Deplores my simplicity.
Vision, fantasy, wonder:
Each I touch and hear.

Truth, appears in awe.

High importance gathers
Itself in the wind,
Upon which I ride.

Somber contrast; sullen ache. What now
wails, against my limbs.
Carefully, I twist inside.

Abstract Defeat

A chance to sit, reflect, then ponder;
Who am I, you, and we?
Often apart, yet when together,
I am still unable to see

The Abstraction Defeats me.

First of all my memories,
Time—treasured clues.
Giving meaning to the smiles & laughter
These I'm bound never to lose

Still, the Abstraction Defeats me.

Searching, I move on,
To family, Friends, and Books.
Definitions upsurd feelings dismissed;
Left with nowhere else to look

Again, the Abstraction Defeats me.

Where is it? I wait,
Anxious, expectant, fearing.
Destined to eternal debate,
Intrinsic to my being.

The Abstraction Defeats me

The African American Society provides a base from which African-American students can express their cultural identity through educational and social activities.

AIESEC is an international organization whose mission is global understanding. Students attend conferences and are given the opportunity to work for a foreign company.

The Amalgamates are a group of men and women who perform an ever widening repertoire of a cappella music.

The American Institute of Chemical Engineers makes students aware of the opportunities available in the professional world, through guest speakers and tours of chemical plants.

The American Chemical Society is an organization that assists chemistry majors with their career decisions. Its members visit places such as Anheuser-Busch, museums, and nuclear power plants, and give demonstrations at local high schools.

The American Society of Civil Engineers helps students to broaden their classroom experience by making professional contacts, presenting papers, and attending lectures.

The American Society of Mechanical Engineers is responsible for furthering students' interests in the profession of mechanical engineering. It arranges speakers and organizes trips to bring students out of the classroom to experience professional industrial settings.

Amnesty International is an impartial human rights organization, working to free prisoners of conscience, to ensure fair trials for all political prisoners, and to abolish torture and executions worldwide. The group hosts speakers and plans events with the goal of increasing human rights awareness.

The Animal Rights Movement at Tufts provides a cohesive base of resources for students interested in furthering the welfare of animals. A.R.M. focuses on education, holding regular awareness days and weeks, information tables, letter writing campaigns, and vegetarian meals.

The Anthropology Collective provides a forum that identifies common interests and makes contacts within the field of anthropology.

Applejam sponsors concerts through which many Tufts' musicians can perform in styles not necessarily supported by the music department. The spring and fall jams are large outdoor events, and pub shows usually serve as debut perform

The Tufts Architectural Society strives to promote awareness of architectural happenings, to provide information regarding graduate studies and career opportunities, and to establish a forum for students who share an interest in building and design. It sponsors films, lectures, and excursions to Boston area landmarks.

The Armenian Club allows students who have a common culture to share their heritage with the Tufts community and other organizations in the area.

The Tufts Asian American Society is where students can draw support from their peers and become aware of and active in the issues concerning their community.

The Beelzebubs are an all-male a cappella singing group, performing on campus and at schools and colleges throughout New England.

Tufts Big Brother/Big Sister is an organization whose members attempt to be positive role models for young Somerville children. The members hope that by providing guidance and direction, each can point a less fortunate child in a direction that will be beneficial.

The Black Theatre Company was founded at the end of the 1988-1989 school year. Its purpose is to diversify theatre at Tufts and encourage participation by students of color. It presents material written by black artists, and serves as a support group for people of color who are interested in theatre.

The Tufts Caribbean Club serves as a melting pot for the cultures and traditions of the Caribbean islands. The club focuses on the need for awareness of the different Caribbean cultures in our community.

The Tufts Catholic Center serves as the primary spiritual and social resource for the Catholic community at Tufts. From the Sunday night worship service, to community service, to weekend retreat programs, this organization works to provide faith-oriented opportunities. Having fun and providing social activities is also a priority.

The Tufts University Chamber Singers are a small a cappella ensemble of twenty voices. Selected from the University Chorale, the Singers perform classical works, madrigals, part songs, and seasonal works at various Tufts concerts and functions.

The Chinese Culture Club promotes Chinese culture in the Tufts community by sponsoring events such as a Chinese New Year celebration and a Mid Autumn Festival.

The Tufts University Chorale is a group of eighty men and women. In the recent past, this celebrated group of singers has traveled to Carnegie Hall and has performed several challenging works.

The Tufts Christian Fellowship seeks "... to know God through Jesus Christ and share his love with the Tufts community." The main activities are weekly meetings and Bible Studies.

The Collective on Latin America provides educational events focusing on Latin America, and publishes the journal Perfiles.

The Tufts Community Union Judiciary is a body comprised of seven elected students from all classes. Its main purpose is to recognize and regulate the activities of TCU student organizations according to their constitutionality and in accordance with University policy.

The Tufts Council on International Affairs organizes activities on campus relating to international affairs. In addition to the organization of Tufts' delegations to Model United Nations Conferences, members are coordinating student peer advising for IR majors and all students planning to go abroad.

The Crafts Center offers woodworking, pottery, tie-dyeing, jewelry making, and other assorted crafts to the Tufts community. It is open daily and offers weekend workshops led by members of the Crafts House.

The Tufts Daily, distributed Monday through Friday, offers news, features, arts, sports, the Viewpoints page, and comics. Tufts is one of the smallest undergraduate populations in the nation to be represented by a daily newspaper, which keeps everyone informed and provides job experience in all aspects of journalism.

The Tufts Dance Collective organizes performances and activities such as films, discussions, and workshops on dance.

The Tufts Democrats are dedicated to expanding students' political consciousness through petition drives, speakers, debates, a yearly symposium, and a newsletter. With letter writing drives, campaigning, national marches, and volunteer work, the Tufts Democrats have helped to further the Democratic Party's goals.

Elections Board (ELBO)

Tufts Emergency Medical Services is a student organization and a professional group of Emergency Medical Technicians, working with the Police and Health Services to provide initial emergency medical care. The group sponsors an EMT course each spring.

The Environmental Consciousness Outreach works toward promoting environmental awareness on the Tufts campus and in the surrounding community. It is composed of groups working for On-Campus Education, Legislation and Activism, Recycling, and Off-Campus Outreach.

Eta Kappa Nu

The Fine Arts Committee is responsible for bringing artists to the Tufts community to lecture about their work. This is an essential and interesting means for aspiring arts majors and curious students to obtain contact and insight from the art world.

Fool's Guild

The French Circle provides a means for promoting French culture through films, food, and fun.

Tufts Geological Society

The German Club brings together the German-speaking community at Tufts and raises awareness of German issues and culture. It does so by showing films, arranging political discussions, sponsoring readings by visiting authors and celebrating traditional holidays such as Fasching, Nikolaus, and the ever-popular Oktoberfest.

The Hebrew-Yiddish Culture Society, affectionately referred to as the "Bayit," is a special interest house striving to promote Jewish and Israeli culture on campus. It is a place for students to spend Sabbaths and holidays in a Jewish environment. The Bayit hosts falafel nights and bagel brunches, as well as informational programs.

The Hellenic Society brings together Greek, Greek-American, and American students. This organization aims to reinforce or establish a connection to Greece and Hellenic culture.

Hemispheres is the Tufts journal of international affairs. It is one of the few completely undergraduate-run journals of its kind in the country. It provides undergraduates with the opportunity to publish works which they have written in the field of international relations.

Tufts Hillel, the center of Jewish activity on campus, does more than hold services and dinner every Friday night and holiday. Hillel's Generation Committee matched students with the elderly in surrounding communities to help them celebrate the holidays. The Social Action Committee ran a "Big Brothers and Sisters" program. The Oppressed Jewry committee continued to solicit support, and the Education Committee hosted a series of discussions on Jewish activism.

Hispanic-American Society

The Human Factors Society promotes interest in the relationship between people, machines, and the environment.

The Tufts Indian Subcontinent Association serves the entire community of Indian, Bangladeshi, Pakistani, Sri Lankan, and other students of the subcontinent on the Tufts campus. The organization promotes cultural, social, and educational activities as well as an awareness of the traditions, needs, and concerns of this group within the Tufts community.

The Institute of Electronic and Electrical Engineers sponsors several social and educational events for students who are in the field of electrical engineering.

The Inter-Dormitory Council was created with the primary purpose of enriching residential life on campus. It does this by encouraging dorm governments to provide educational, social, and cultural activities within the dorms. In addition, the I.D.C. sponsors the Homecoming Float Parade, the reading period Quad Run, and Dorm Olympics.

The Inter-Greek Council consists of members from all Tufts Greek chapters and works not only for the betterment of the Greek community, but also for the improvement of the entire Tufts community. This can be seen in the newly created committees: GAMMA (Greeks Advocating the Mature Management of Alcohol), the Sexual Harassment and Date Rape Committee, the Alumni Committee, and the Academic Committee. The IGC also acts as a liaison between the faculty and administration and the Greek community.

The International Club promotes understanding of world cultures and serves as a place for foreign and American students to meet and exchange ideas.

The Tufts Irish American Society is a cultural and social organization dedicated to exposing interested members of the Tufts community to Irish life and culture. Members discuss current political, economic, and social concerns in Ireland as well as the fate of the Irish immigrants.

The Tufts Islamic Society provides a means for Islamic students to come together and share their common culture and religion.

The Tufts Israel Network (TIN) is a Zionist organization whose activities include speakers, movies, and programs fairs. The group's aims are to reach out to the Tufts community to provide information about Israel to interested students and to keep current information available for students regarding the Middle East situation.

The Tufts Italian Club boasts an active membership of students interested in Italian culture. Events include North End dinners, Italian movie fests, Bocce tournaments, and dessert and coffee hours.

The Jackson Jills are Tufts' only female a cappella singing group, bringing wit, humor, and song to the stage.

Jadi Umoja means "racial unity" in Swahili, the language of the Bantu people of Africa. This group tries to encourage pride in one's ethnicity and provide a means of expressing that pride in a comfortable atmosphere.

Japanese Culture Club

The Jumbo Marching Band has had a successful season sporting new formal uniforms. Major events this year were the four home football games, the Homecoming Pep Rally, and the Homecoming Parade. After the football season ends the band remains active, playing at local events, marching in parades, and a trip is planned at the end of the year.

The Korean Students Association aims to increase the unity among Korean students, while enhancing on-campus awareness of Korean history and culture.

The Latin American Society serves the dual purpose of congregating the Latin community at Tufts and of promoting cultural awareness at the university. It gives the Latin American students the opportunity to continue with some of their cultural traditions, and gives non-Latin students the chance to be exposed to a different culture.

Tufts Student Resources is a non-profit enterprise run entirely by students, providing its members with first hand business experience.

The Tufts Symphonic Band is a thirty-four member ensemble. Whether playing in Cohen Auditorium, at Faneuil Hall Marketplace, or on other college campuses, it continues to provide quality music and "tons of fun" for its members.

Tau Beta Pi is the national engineering honor society. Membership is among the highest honors that can be conferred upon an engineer. Tau Beta Pi strives "to foster a spirit of liberal culture in engineering colleges."

Teach for America Tufts encourages seniors to consider teaching as a profession, working through the Teach for America program.

The Third Day Gospel Choir provides an opportunity for people to come together and express themselves through gospel music.

Torn Ticket II is Tufts' musical theater organization. Entirely student run, it gives all thespians an opportunity to perform or work behind the scenes on performances. Providing fun, friends, great times, and new experiences, Torn Ticket II has been an outlet for Tufts crazy, goofy, musical theater-people.

The Tufts Tri-Service Organization is a student run social

Captains: Kerry Callahan, Matt Guanci, Mike Kratochwill

The Jumbos posted their best record in several years with a 21-9 mark. The team also set several school records enroute to its third straight trip to ECAC championship play. As a team, the Brown and Blue set the mark for wins, home runs, and on the mound, strikeouts. In addition, senior Kerry Callahan set the career record for strikeouts (157) while fellow hurler Marc Williams tied the season mark for shutouts (2). At the plate, senior Bill Canon closed out his career holding the season RBI and home run records. The First Team All-New England outfielder also holds the career mark for RBI (116) and homers (19). Also named to the All-New England team were Ed LaVallee and Matt Guanci. In addition, Guanci was named the co-recipient of the Fobert Award for the outstanding multi-sport athlete.

women's lacrosse

Summing up a 9-3 season for five time ECAC champions is not easy. After all, a 9-3 record is considered a successful campaign. But winning has become the norm for the Brown and Blue and three losses is considered three too many for Coach Carol Rappoli and her Jumbos. The team, which carried a 30-game winning streak into the 90s, extended its NCAA record-setting mark to 35 games. The Jumbos also made an unprecedented seventh trip to the ECAC post-season tournament. Unfortunately, for the first time, the Brown and Blue failed to make it into the championship round. Senior Melissa Lowe continued her assault on the opposing goalie as she netted 51 goals and 18 assists. In addition, the First Team All-New England player holds four school records including points in a career, assists in both a career and season, and goals in a season. Lowe was also named the co-recipient of the Fobert Award for the outstanding multi-sport athlete.

She set the season mark for strikeouts, era, and strikeouts in a game. She also added to her career records of appearances, innings, strikeouts, and complete games. The Brown and Blue set two team records of its own: pitching staff strikeouts and era. Senior catcher Kirstin Losert was also named to the GTE Academic All-America Regional team.

Tufts Third Place

Head Coach: Jim Watson

Captain: David Ober

The Jumbos posted an 8-2 record enroute to a third place finish at the conference championships. The Brown and Blue's two losses came at the hands of Division I Boston College and New England nemesis, Amherst College. Senior Dave Ober, the #1 singles New England champion, made his third consecutive trip to Nationals where he also paired up with classmate John Hertzner in doubles.

women's track

The women's track and field team, led by Karen Reardon and assistant coach Everad Samuels, once again had a successful season. A big season highlight was the opening and dedication of the Dussault outdoor track where three home meets were held. One of these three meets was the New England Small College Athletic Conference championship, where the Jumbos placed second. Other highlights were a 5-0 record in the regular season, and a third place finish at the Eastern College Athletic Conference. An event that cannot be forgotten, although most people were already home enjoying their summer, was the trip to the NCAA Division III Nationals in Illinois taken by Tracy Kaufman, Vera Stenhouse, and Carol Tate. All three athletes were named All-American, and they brought home a fifth place finish for Tufts. Most importantly, though, were the individual achievements and the spirit and enjoyment expressed by everyone which made the season a successful one.

men's crew

The four Jumbo boats rowed their way to a strong 18-7 record under Head Coach, Ken Weinstein. The varsity lightweight-eight won four straight before losing to UMass and Trinity to close out the season. The team then went on to capture fourth at the Dad Vails in the finals. The two freshman boats combined for a 10-2 record which is great news for seasons to come.

women's crew

The women posted a combined 8-7 record during the regular race season. And what a deceptive record it was as the varsity-four captured the New England title and went on to finish 5th out of 30 at the Dad Vails. Meanwhile the novice-four finished third in the New Englands and the novice-eight finished second. The eight also finished fourth in the semi-finals of the Dad Vails.

The lady harriers finished with an impressive 8-1 record in what was to be a rebuilding year. Back after a year sabbatical, Coach Branwen Smith-King guided the women to a 4th place finish overall and first in the Small College Division at the GBCS. The team also ran well at the NEWICCTFA with a 5th place finish by the JV and 17th by the varsity. The team then went on to capture 8th at the ECACs, which were hosted by the Jumbos. In dual meets, the women lost to just Division I Holy Cross while defeating Division I foe Central Connecticut State University.

After dropping their first two games, the Jumbos came back with a vengeance to close out the 1990 campaign with a 6-2 slate. The wishbone proved the key once again with Mike LaCamera, Jim Downing, Walter Boehl, Steve Alconada, and Stephen Conner on the field. The defense was equally impressive with JR McDonald, Todd Romboli and George Lawrence patrolling the defense. No doubt ranked among the Division III Top Ten Rushing category for the fifth straight year, the Jumbos also boasted numerous All-Conference and All-ECAC players. Senior center Mike Callahan was also named to the Academic All-American Second team, while Mike LaCamera was named the Conference Co-Offensive Player of the Year and Walter Boehl earned Conference Rookie of the Year honors.

The women posted an impressive 8-4-2 record this fall, despite injuries to key players. It was the Jumbos tenth consecutive winning season and they just missed out on their tenth straight post-season appearance. Leading the team in scoring was the trio of Mindy Freiband, Liz Zimney, and Amy King. All three will return next fall. Highlights of the season included a 1-0 double overtime win over Curry College, which gave Head Coach Bill Gelhing win #100. Sophomore goalie Martha Whiting also etched her name in the record books as she tied the mark for fewest goals allowed in a season. Sophomore forward Amy King was named a NEWISA All New England and Second Team All New Englander by the NSCAA.

men's soccer

There were so many firsts for the men's team this fall. For example, there was the final record of 9-5-1, the Jumbos' best since 1976; their first winning season since 1979; their first post-season bid in over 13 years; their first win over Amherst since 1976; and their first win ever over Connecticut College. The season also saw new marks in the record books. Senior Neil Hare tied the mark for points in a season and goals in a season while sophomore goalie Pat Duffy broke the season shutout record. (He needs just three over the next two seasons to break the career mark). In addition, Hare was named to the All New England and NEISL All-Star squads.

The Women's Rugby Club witnessed an increase in the number of players again this season. The blend of experience and youth resulted in a strong and winning squad, one that has produced the best record in the history of Tufts Women's Rugby. Because the team consisted of many players, at least half of which were returning skilled athletes, we were able to schedule opponents against whom we played two sides, an "A" and a "B". Our strong A side dominated all of its matches with the exception of Holy Cross. Even the Brown match, which resulted in a 0-0 tie, proved to be an example of the improvement achieved by our team. Our B side/new players also showed much improvement as the season progressed, largely due to Anna's excellent coaching and encouragement, along with the help of experienced returning players.

skiing

The Tufts Ski team competed in 10 races during the 1990-1991 season at ski areas all over Vermont. The men's team, led by Eric Larsen, MacAndrew Jack, and Brad Tirpak, finished third in the MacBrien Division of the ECSC. The women, behind strong finishes from Christine Mikes, Tanya Shuler, and Cara Haries, finished third as well.

fencing

This year the fencing club had its most successful season to date. The success of the team is a significant accomplishment given its minimal budget and outdated equipment. The team's 12-5 record included a first ever victory over MIT and victories over two other varsity teams. The season ended with a strong fifth place finish in the New England Champoinships.

Music 1990-1991

Paula Abdul is a big hit. The dancer-choreographer turned vocalist hasn't left the top 40 pop charts for a year. The 28 year-old has much success ahead of her.

The three guys who call themselves Bell Biv DeVoe rolled onto the music scene this year in a big way. Their album Poison jumped to the top ten and the single "Do Me" is a hit.

2-Live Crew is a group that made hit songs and big headlines this year. The police in Florida considered their album As Nasty As You Wanna Be to be obscene, and a record store owner was found guilty of selling it. And, it seems that their legal problems aren't over yet. They just keep moving along.

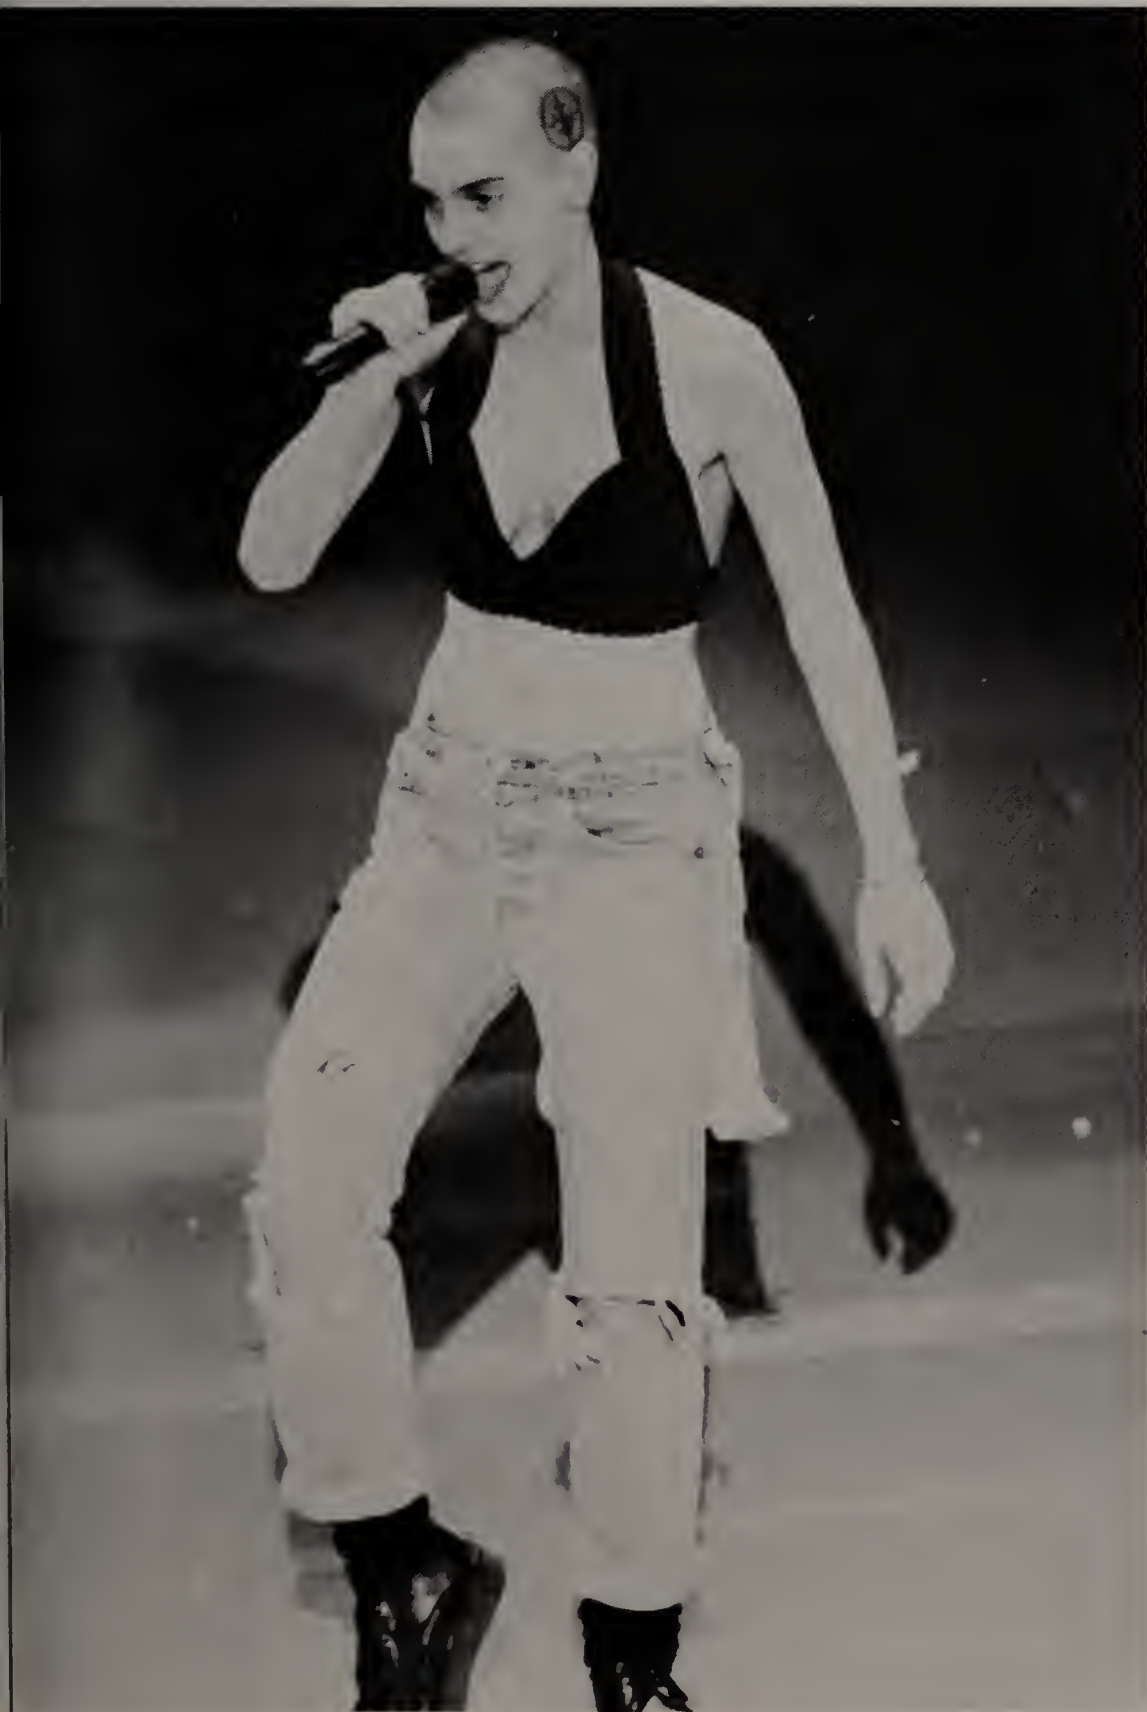

When you're hot, you're hot, and the golden girl Madonna has been hot for a long time. The actress, singer and "material girl" has had hit after hit on the charts.

Rock superstar Phil Collins received a Grammy for album of the year, ...But Seriously, and the first hit single off the album focused on the homelessness that plagues this country.

Sinéad O'Connor, the shaved head, immense eyed, 23 year-old Irish singer left the music industry moved with the number one hit "Nothing Compares 2 U."

Janet Jackson skyrocketed to the top in 1990 with her hit-laden album Rhythm Nation 1814.

M.C. Hammer's second album, Please Hammer Don't Hurt 'Em, sold close to 5 million copies and is one of a few rap albums in history to reach the top of the pop charts.

At 5:04 p.m. on October 17, the earth shook in northern California. An earthquake that measured 7.0 on the Richter Scale destroyed parts of Oakland and San Francisco and surrounding areas. More than 60 were killed, hundreds were injured and the damage topped $2 billion.

Senior Year

Top to Bottom, Left to Right: On May 16, 1990, Jim Henson, puppeteer and entertainer of all ages passed away. His death touched all; In February of 1990, Nelson Mandela was released from his life sentence posted in 1962; Food had become a scarce commodity in the Soviet Union and the U.S. provided relief; On October 3, 1990, East and West Germany united to become the Federal Republic of Germany; Tanks and troops in the Persian Gulf; Demonstrators in Prague demanded an end to the Communist Party—they lit candles and placed flowers on bloodstained sidewalks where police attacked protesters in the largest such rally in 20 years; Saddam Hussein, president and iron-fisted ruler of Iraq, invaded Kuwait in August and most of the world became his enemy; Hours after the invasion, Arabs throughout the world took to the streets in anti-Iraq demonstrations. Pictured here is one of those demonstrations in London

You're the best there's ever been. If it's ever up to me, Secretary of Commerce is yours.

With all my respect, confidence, and heart.

Peter,

I never could have done
this for three years without you!

You're the best! Good Luck with '92. Remember #5!!!!

Love,

Suzanne

Suzanne...

I am glad to have become your friend.

May you have much success in the future.

Love to you both,

Ross

Suz,

If you teach only one thing,
then let it be the love for learning. And I have learned much under your guidance. Be the best at whatever you do—you always were anyway.

Best of luck with the children and don't you ever forget to #5.

Love,

PKM

Espresso's

"Saves the Day"

396-0062

Act One

Mary and Jane contemplate life...

Let's order Espresso's

Act Two

...then the two starving Tufts students call the Espresso's Hotline 396-0062

two pints of Ben and Jerry's, a large pepperoni pizza, and two diet cokes

Act Three

...the pizza arrives not a moment too soon!! Mary and Jane have been saved !

yeah

yum!

...another Tufts student has been saved by Espresso's:
The Best Pizza at Tufts

Colophon

Volume 66 of the Tufts University Jumbo Yearbook was printed by Josten's Printing and Publishing Division in State College, Pennsylvania, using offset lithography. Of the 304 pages, 32 were printed in four color process. Paper stock was 100 lb. gloss in signatures one and nineteen. Matte 195 was used for the remainder of the book.

The Craftline cover is #498 laredo leather with Brushstroke grain and hand rubbed #326 black over-tone. The seal was embossed from a fully modeled brass die cut with # 590 gold Metalay applied. Endsheets were #303 Parchmatte. Ghosted photos that appeared on the division pages were copied from Tufts University Archives by Varden Studios.

All body copy is 10 or 12 point Souvenir. Caption copy is 8 point Souvenir. Headlines and cover copy are Souvenir Italic and range in size from 14-60 point.

The Jumbo Yearbook budget was $42,000. Books were available to seniors for $40.00. 1200 books were printed.
